USAF Secretary Not Told of Raids

By George C. Wilson

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17 (WP). -Air Force Secretary Robert C. Seamans ir. says that he learned of the recent bombing offensive against North Vietnam while watching television.

"I am not in the operational chain of command," Mr. Seamans explained in a weakend interview. "I'm not authorizing any bombing. My job is one of men and ma-

"Where the bombing occurs is really not my decision," Mr. Seamans said. "From Christmas to New Year's I was on vacation in New England. The first thing I knew about the December raids was when I heard it on the "Today show."

The Air Force says that only five men, three of them military officers, are in the regular operational chain of command that selects bombing targets in Indo-china: President Nixon; Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird; Adm. Thomas H. Moorer, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff; Adm. John S. McCain, commander of Pacific forces, and Gen. Creighton Abrams, U.S. field commander in Vietnam

But there is evidence that more people have been in on past decisions on the bombing. The Pentagon papers, for instance, showed wide government participation in the selection of bombing targets during the Johnson ad-ministration—especially if hitting them threatened to escalate the Vietnam war.

Intense Campaign

At a news conference Dec. 16, Mr. Seamans displayed r. series of charts to show that the trend of the air war "is definitely downward." In five days of raids beginning Dec. 26, the Nixon administration unleashed 1,000 bombing sorties against North Vietnam, the most intensive since President Nixon took office. (A sortie is one plane flying one mission.)

A former Pentagon exc_ative of Mr. Seamans's rank, who declined to be identified, was asked about Mr. Seamans's statement that he had not been consulted about the raids.

"If I were Seamans and that happened to me," he said, "I would be highly teed off. "Technically, they can say he is not in the chain. But the secretary who supplies the planes and men ought to have a say in what they're going to be used

"It would not have happened to Harold Brown (former secretary of the Air Force). It's another example of how tightly these things are held."

Critics of bombing, including George Ball, former under-secretary of state, have argued that the dynamics of U.S. air war strategy dictate steady escalation. That is, the more the United States bombs, the more Hand has to defend and then the more the United States has to bomb to blow up Hanoi's defenses. Still Vital

Mr. Seamans contended that U.S. bombing was still a vital necessity for allied operations in Indochina, making these points during the interview in his Pen-

• The Laotian government, whose forces are under attack in northern Laos, has "asked for all the support we can give them." • Part of Hanol's grand stratery for Laos may be to draw as much U.S. air power as possible away from the Ho Chi Minh Trail and toward the less vital grounds of northern Laos. The U.S. Air Force campaign in the far north of Laos is codenamed Barrel Roll and the one in the panhandle of southern Laos—threaded by the network of roads called the Ho Chi Minh Trail—is called Steel Tiger. Mr. Seamans said that the

"The travesty of justice occurs when the North Vietnamese get in there. They are rough I have

Right now, the Air Force sec-retary added, 90 percent of the air war in South Vietnam is being conducted by the South Vietnamese. They are also flying "over 50 percent" of the missions in Cambodia. This means that the bulk of the U.S. effort in the air is over Laos.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17 (UPI). The Supreme Court agreed to-day to rule for the first time in a school desegregation dispute involving a non-Southern city. The court will hear arguments

U.S. District Judge William E. Doyle of Denver has written four opinions in the complex case, which was before the Supreme Court about a year ago. As to other schools in the system, the complaint alleged that the authorities deliberately created and maintained racial and ethnic segregation in a "core" area. NEW YORK, Jan. 17 (NYT).-The name of Clark Clifford, former Secretary of Defense, was introduced yesterday into the growing controversy over a purported autobiography of Howard Hughes.

In addition, the author who produced the manuscript has asserted that an associate also saw and talked with the reclusive Mr. Hughes.

Those developments in the dispute over the book, which will be published by the McGraw-Hill Book Co. on March 7, came in interviews with the author, Clifford Irving. He has been pressed to substantiate his assertion that he met with Mr. Hughes about 100 times and tape-recorded their discussions, which form the basis of the book.

The name of Mr. Clifford, now a Washington lawyer, emerged in a transcript of an interview with Mr. Irving last night on "60 Min-utes," a Columbia Broadcasting System television, program. The interviewer was Mike Wallace. who had been permitted to read the original typescripts of Hughes-Irving interviews.

Nixon's Brother Involved

As a preface to one question, Mr. Wallace said that Mr. Hughes had-been quoted as saying that "hribery and favors are at the root of the American political system." Then he asked about a reported loan by Mr. Hughes to M. Donald Nixon, a brother of President Nixon, in 1956.

Mr. Irving answered that the loan had been for $205,000 and that "Mr. Hughes was asked for the money."

Mr. Wallace asked who had requested the loan. Mr. Irving was not willing to supply the name, but Mr. Wallace, drawing on his reading of the manuscript, asked if it had been Clark

Nixon Tells Aides to Tighten Security and Prevent Leaks

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17 (UPI). President Nixon has ordered a tightening of security within the dministration to prevent leaks of information similar to the publication of secret U.S. deliberations on the India-Pakistan war, the White House said today.

Press Secretary Ron Ziegler said that Mr. Nixon wanted to "make absolutely sure that information on various segments of policy discussions does not flow from private meetings."

"We can't operate effectively when these things become public, Mr. Ziegler said. It was the first official White House reaction to columnist Jack Anderson's recent reports that Mr. Nixon ordered a in U.S. policy in favor of Paki-stan during its two-week war with India in December.

But Face Budget Cut

Sky Marshals Held Success; 539 Arrests in First Year

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17 (AP). The Customs Bureau reported yesterday the Sky Marshal program is an effective deterrent to hijackings, and has resulted in 539 arrests and the seizure of thousands of weapons in the first year of operation.

The burean issued the figures amid reports that the program will come in for a cutback in the fiscal 1973 budget that will be announced in another week.

Customs Commissioner Myles J. Ambrose said 20 arrests have been made aboard aircraft, including seven in response to hijackings in which the hijacker made himself known.

Thirteen other arrests "involved serious threats to the safety of flight," he said.

The other 519 arrests were made during pre-departure flight checks, Mr. Ambrose said. He said Sky Marshals responded to more than 50 bomb threats. Many of those apprehended on the ground were what Mr. Ambrose called "typical hijackers" heavily armed persons with

Leftists' Bomb Kills 4 Police In Argentina

BUENOS AIRES, Jan. 17 (Reuters).—Police today combed the Argentine capital for left-wing urban guerrillas who left a bomb Friday which exploded and killed four policemen. The bomb had been placed at the home of a former minister.

The victims were explosive experts who caught the full force of the blast, which ripped open the front of the building, as they raced to defuse the plastic bomb. Six other members of the squad the region bordering the Persian Gulf, and that is its possession of 70 percent of the petroleum reserves in an energy-hungry world. This is, of course, an extremely important fact, and one that accounts for much of the complexity and dublety affecting other aspects of the Gulf.

There is, for example, the question of the price of that petroleum, as altered by the devaluation of the American dollar and the conflicting interests engaged in the current bargaining—not only as between producing and consuming countries but within those two groups. And those conflicts involve political and strategic interests as well.

The Shah of Iran, having demonstrated at considerable cost and with much fanfare the antiquity of his throne, has been asserting dominion over the Gulf in the wake of the departing British. He opposes any "foreign presence" in the Guif, with specific reference to the American agreement to base naval forces at Bahrein. The Shah has made some very telling points about the inability of the United States to act as "international gendarme," about the dilution of the role of the superpowers generally, and the need for recognizing the ability of local nations to assume their own responsibilities.

In all of this, the shah would have strong backing in America. But the question remains: What local power can assure reason-

There is only one indisputable fact about able security of transit and production in the Gulf region? Iran is probably the best suited to the role-but neither Iraq nor a number of other Arab governments accept Iranian hegemony. In fact, tension between Iraq, at the head of the Gulf, and Iran has been increasing over that very issue.

As the shah emphasized, a grave danger to the Gulf, and to the petroleum traffic, is the possibility of guerrilla attacks from secret bases along the Gulf shores. To control this threat (which was emphasized by an incident not too long ago on the other side of the Arabian peninsula) regular naval forces controlled by a distant power are not likely to prove effective, and may even enhance the peril. But suppose there should be war between Iraq and Iran? The shah admits his country is not yet "a formidable military power," and even if one assumes that it is in the process of oecoming one, Iran might still be challenged at this time, to the enormous disruption of a trade that is essential to the Persian Gulf countries and to those whom it supplies with oil.

Perhaps American ships in Bahrain cannot insure against such a disaster. Doubtless there are better ways of meeting the problem-international guarantees of some sort. The main point now is that Iran alone cannot now be counted on to keep open the sea lanes in the Persian Gulf and that of Oman. Such a task demands cooperation.

effort to ascertain whether a settlement reached in November between Britain and Rhodesia's white minority government is "acceptable to the people of Rhodesia as a whole." It will be a delicate, difficult task, the outcome of which will have considerable bearing on the chances for peaceful evolution of white-black relations in Southern Africa as well as on Britain's international standing.

The complexity of the task can be simply stated: The commission, in effect, is a substitute for the general referendum that would seem a logical instrument for determining Rhodesian opinion on the terms of the settlement, under which black majority rule would be technically possible at some distant date if the white government kept its commitments. Rhodesia's white rulers would never have agreed to a free vote on this issue in a country where blacks outnumber whites 20 to one, and neither the present Conservative British government nor its Labor predecessor insisted on a referendum.

A British commission has now begun its chairman, three deputy chairmen and 16 additional members are all white and all British. No effort was made to make the commission multiracial by appointing nonwhite members from Commonwealth countries. It was selected by a government that is a party to the agreement and working hard to "sell" it-in Britain, Rhodesia and around the world.

For its travels and contacts in Rhodesia, the commission will inevitably be heavily dependent on the other party to the agreement, Prime Minister Ian Smith's white minority regime. The tribal chiefs it will consuit are on Smith's payroll. The two African leaders with demonstrated mass support have been in detention for many years.

Yet Lord Pearce and his three deputy chairmen are eminent men of unquestioned integrity. They and their colleagues-mostly veterans of Britain's colonial and African service-may find ways to probe more deeply among Rhodesia's five million blacks than Smith intends or than the government that appointed them expected. Those who care deeply about Britain's reputation for fair ling must hope so.

International Opinion

Malta Issue

The crucial issue now is not so much the money but the terms on which the extra NATO money is to be given. Is Mintoff being asked to abandon his neutrality, and is he really likely to accept that? The talks could easily break down again on that point. It was hinted earlier that Mintoff was unwilling to let NATO use the harbor, but that he would allow the Warsaw Pact navies, which of course means the Russians.

The possible face-saver here could be an arrangement allowing for warships to call only for repairs. This is not against what NATO wants. Indeed Mintoff has been trying to get more repair work from several NATO countries already. On the other hand, it is unlikely that the Russians will be willing to let their warships use the harbor on that basis for reasons of security. Honor could be satisfied all round.

Pessimism on the Jarring Mission

Despite worldwide political shifts, in the 11 months since the initial failure of the Jarring mission there has been hardly any alteration in the perspectives of the Middle East conflict. Its ultimate subject matter continues to be not the drawing of boundaries but the existence of Israel. When the Ieraelis argue that Arab enmity dates from well before the 1967 Six-Day War and that thus even an unconditional withdrawal from the territories occupied in 1967 would be no means guarantee secure frontiers and peaceful coexistence, their ergument is based on two decades of experience. The same experience has yielded Israel's widespread skepticism toward the UN, an attitude which was confirmed and reinforced by the role of the UN in the India-Pakistan war, when the world organization was again ntterly powerless in the face of armed hostilities. The preconditions for a success of the Jarring mission have thus deteriorated further. At the moment there are no signs of a way out of the vicious circle in the Middle East,

Getting Rhodesian Opinion

When the Rhodesian settlement terms were negotiated, they tended to be greeted with triumph by white Rhodesians, and with something approaching dismay by liberal opinion in this country. Yet within a very short time, the white Rhodesians have started to take a less confident view of the situation, largely as a result of the work of the Pearce commission. It is still not clear how Lord Pearce is going to explain to the mass of the Africans terms which are highly technical and not widely understood even in Britain, let alone how he hopes to judge whether they are acceptable to the people of Rhodesia as a whole.

-From the Financial Times (London). View From Cairo

The only dominating theme which is to be found in President Sadat's speech (last week) and in all recent pronouncements out of Cairo is exasperation with American policies. For over a year, so it appears in Cairo, the Americans have kept all the threads of negotiation in their own hands. And the Egyptians, to further the peace to which they have been committed since Nasser's death, have made many concessions, short only of the concession of territory. And from all this, the only positive outcome is that Israel gets, apparently without conditions, still more of the Phantoms whose destructive power Egyptians living in the delta know all too well. The view from Cairo is, of course, only one view of the crisis, but there can be no doubt that disenchantment there with America is complete and bitter and the demotion of Dr. Fawzi may be intended to draw pointed attention to it.

LONDON.—Anyone who re-flects these days on the relationship of man and earth must eventually find himself operat-ing at two levels of awareness. He worries about his bouse and his car, his income and his possessions in the usual way. He gets angry at politicians when the power fails and his air conditioner stops. He hopes his union will get that wage increase, or the company whose stock he owns will sell more of its new gad-

For even a little serious thought will have made him "growth" of modern economic life are based on the plundering of a finite environment. And the thin crust of earth and air and water that sustains us is near its limits.

A coincidence of events last week showed how our political Hie deals with the unpleasant reality of environmental crisis in the same way, by operating in separate compartments.
In London, 33 distinguished scientists supported a "Blueprint for Survival" to avoid ecological catastrophe in our children's lifetimes, if not ours. Instead of industrialization and growth, it said, we must move "stable society" with limits on population and the use of resources. We must learn to think of everything we do in terms of effects on the environment. In the same week it became known that the Stockholm Conference on the Environment. long planned for next June as the first great worldwide eveut of its kind, was in danger of foundering on a diplomatic issue. At the insistence of West Germany and its allies. East Germany was being excluded—and the Soviet bloc therefore threatening to stay away. And this exclusion despite the fact that East Germany is a major industrial power and is likely to be a UN member by the time of the conference.

Crisis Coming

"Diplomacy against biology," one scientist said. "It is absurd." He might better have said: politics against life.

Politicians are like the rest of us enlarged. They underestimate, or perhaps they hide from, the gravity of the ecological crisis and the speed with which it is coming. They tinker with this pollution or that, they pass a useful law, but they do not face the essential truth that a revolution of attitudes is needed.

The Ecologist, a British magazine, published the "Blueprint for Survival." First it set out the reasons for urgency. For example, resources are running out under the pressures of exponential growth. Ecological demand will multiply by a factor of 32 over the next 66 years at present growth rates: Can anyone imagine the earth meeting such a requirement? Even if we stop population growth completely in developed countries in 30 years. and the rest of the world in 70. world population will stabilize at more than four times present numbers. One may argue over this figure or that, but it is impossible to resist the conclusion that a crisis is coming. The blueprint proposed an integrated program to meet the erisis. It rested on a call for

What makes "The Closing Circle" such an impressive book is that Commoner rejects pessimism. He does so not by fleeing from reality, or by responding to facts with despair, but by thinking in hard terms of what has to be done. He says calmly and quietly, for example, that over the next generation the United States must spend more than $40 billion annually on ecological reconstruction. That would mean almost all of our capital investment.

Can it conceivably be done? If we begin to think about it, begin to read the newspaper stories and the blueprints and the books, a sated and weary society might even welcome the challenge. Commoner would say that America, richest and also most inventive of countries, offers the world its best hope. The first step is for politicians to take the issue seriously: the whole problem, the philosophical challenge. Who will begin?

After December demonstrations, discipline in Zagreb has been rapidly restored through a wave of resignations, press attacks on "counter-revolutionaries," arrests, and plainclothesmen around university buildings. But somebody has scrawled "Hellas" (Greece) on a wall, and a young lawyer with a good job says he is con-sidering emigrating.

Vantage Point

From this vantage point it is not easy to see how the Yugoslav ideal of voluntary union of diverse nations, always dependent on a satisfactory balance between Serbs and Croats, can be reconstructed.

The abject self-criticism by Mrs. Savka Dahoevic-Eucar, the party leader, and her protégés has only raised all the old Croat suspicions of persecution by the Serbs and the central government in Belgrade. It may take a long time for the scars to disappear. A Croat himself, Tito was thought of here before December as the greatest patron of national rights.

More serious still is the setback in finding a formula for taking the emotion out of Serb-Croat relations.

"The meaning of this," said a Belgrade professor, "is that we have failed to build a society." That point has begun to sink in at Belgrade, after an initial upsurge of gratitude at the demise of the Croat "nationalists."

"After all," sald a journalist in the Yugoslav capital, "It is younger Serbs, not Tito, who are going to have to live with the Croats for the next 40 years."

Diverse Currents

Among the diverse currents that had been flourishing under the now tattered banner of the Croat "Narodni Pokret" (netional move-ment) were aspirations for democratization. During 1970 to 1971, when the movement gained steam, press freedoms increased, the party showed more openness to Cetholics and non-Communists. and e reconciliation with nonextreme elements among Croats abroad had begun.

This is the mountainous, underdeveloped region of Croatia and Herzego-vins, imbabited by unemployed men, and peasants and mountaineers embittered by lack of social security pensions. It is also an area where primitive ethnic hatreds abound.

However, the appearance at the December demonstrations of members of the Zagreb "new left" (who were ousted by the student nationalist wing at the university last April) suggested that the protests had a wide spectrum of support.

Before Tito's action in December, one Croat intellectual said; "As long as the old man is around, nothing will change very much. But after that, things will change very rapidly.

"It is possible to imagine the idea of a Croatia within a federal Yugoslavia, but in practice it is more difficult What is to be

Thus, the Croatian party found itself forced to compromise on orthodox Marxism by espousing the national movement. This was

It has also raised the question whether the Titoist policy of allowing a little bit of nationalism as a vent, inside a loosely knit Yugoslav federation, can be carried through.

Again Italy Begins the Ritual Of Searching for a Premier

Greek in France To See Weapons

stability to Italy's shaky parliamentary democracy. Problems are shelved, political showdowns put off and the state bureaucracy is left to its own lethargic devices.

The country is at the bottom of the deepest economic slump since World War II, the schools are shaken by student protests, judiciary branch of government is in disarray and the politicians have just wasted many months in the struggle that ended with the election of Mr. Leone as the new head of state

May Last for Weeks Now, the president's first significant task will consist in presiding at the minuet-like proceedings of another govern-ment crisis that may last for weeks, leaving the business of running Italy to the bureaucracy In the present procrastinatory stage, Mr. Leone sees his visitors at hourly intervals to receive ad-vice that he could get with a few telephone calls. At the end of the ceremonial talks, probably on Saturday, the bead of state will announce his choice of a premierdesignate.

As likely as not, the nod will go to the outgoing premier, Emilio Colombo, who resigned Saturday after 17 months in office, an unusually long period as Italian governments go. Should Mr. Co-lombo fall in an effort to shore up again the center-left coalition that just collapsed, Mr. Leone would have to nominate another candidate for the premiership— after another round of consultations, that is,

The press and the state radio and television network, which tell the nation much more about the comings and goings at the Quirinal than it cares to know, keep calling them "constitutional consultations."

Actually, the constitution of 1948 tersely provides that "the president of the republic names the president of the council of ministers," or premier, but does not say that the head of state must hear 40 notables before making up his mind.

However, since the beginnings of the Italian republic 25 years ago the formal consultations have become a tradition. This resumed a usage observed by the Savoy kings before Fascism, and copied the practice employed in France during government crises before the Fifth Republic broadened the powers of the presidency.

In Italy, the ceremonial consultations during each of the frequent government crises-on the average, one in less than 10 months-tend to become more tedious as the list of notables lengthens.

Among others, the head of state is now receiving advice on how to solve the government crisis from his surviving predecessors, the present and former speakers of the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate, former premiers and the parliamentary floor leaders and national secretaries of Italy's nine major parties.

Details Are Given In Iran on Bid to Seize U.S. Envov

TEGRAN, Jan. 17 (Reuiers).— U.S. Ambassador Donglas Mac-Arthur 2d and his wife were shot at as they foiled a midnight kidnap attempt here 13 months ago, the American Embassy said here today.

The embassy was giving details of the kidnep attempt revealed yesterday by an Iranian security spokesman who alleged that this was one of a number of acts committed by a group of 120 Iranians due to face charges of sabotage, subversion and espionage before a military court.

The U.S. Embassy spokesman said the ambassador and his wife were returning from a dinner party at midnight on Nov. 30 1970, when their car was stopped by two cars.

The ambassador realized that the occupants of the other cars were armed and were attempting to seize them," the spokesman said. "He ordered the driver to proceed and the ambassador's car broke through the ambush."
"At this point the assailants shot at the car and attempted to break the window with an axe, but they were unsuccessful and ambassador escaped," the spokesman said.

Daisy Ashford, 90, Reputed English Child Authoress

NORWICH, England, Jan 17 (AP).—Best-selling authoress Daisy Ashford, 90, who wrote a book rated by Sames Berrie as a masterpiece when she was only nine, died here Saturday. Her book, "The Young Visiters," high-society romance seen through the nursery keyhole, caused a sensation when it was published just after World War I, when Miss Ashford was 37. It has sold more than half a million copies and is still in print, prompting its writer, who bought a farm on the proceeds, to ob-serve once: "I like fresh air—and The book's charm lay in its child's account of Victorian England's middle-class manners and snobberies and its endearing-ly original spelling. Miss Ashford had one of her characters remark: "I am par-shial to ladies if they are nice I suppose it is my nature. I am not quite a gentleman, but you would bardly notice it."

The manuscript remained with the family until a friend sent it to literary critic Frank Swinnerton, who was working as a reader for a publishing house. Mr. Swinnerton persuaded Barrie, with some difficulty, to write a preface and "The Young Visi-ters" was published in 1919. Mr. Swinnerton remembered Miss Ashford later as "a gentle little thing, very shy, giggling and tremendously excited at the

The work was an instant success, but many people thought Barrie himself must have been the real author. A woman journalist chased Mr.

Swinnerton down a London street shouting: "Did he or did she?" Mr. Swinnerton revealed that the family would have preferred him to publish another book called "The Jealous Governess," which had been written by Miss Ashford's sister, Angela, when she was a child.

He refused because the appearance simultaneously of the two books might strain public credulity too far.

Miss Ashford never had another literary success and gave up her writing career in 1894.

U.K. Blowing Up Chemical Drums Floating Ashore

PENZANCE, England, Jan. 17 (UPI).—Royal Navy bomb disposal squads today began blowing up 100 drums containing toxic chem-icals that floated ashore in Cornwall, in southern England.

Residents in the area said substances leaking from some of the drums caused them ill-effects. "Everyone who went near it complained that it caused their tongue to dry np and feel as if it was swelling. Their skin developed a prickly itchy sensa-tion and their eyes started to water," said Michael Eustis. The Union Carbide Company in Belgium told the British government the drums were from the Spanish ship Germania that sank near the Channel Islands Dec. 21. The company had a consignment of over 200 barrels of chemicals on the ship, and some of them were "extremely dangerous," a company spokesman said.

In London, the Department of Trade and Industry said the vessel carried 867 drums of chemicals, including ethyl acetate, an inflammable solvent which gives off poisonous fumes.

The official Language Act of 1969 spelled out the princi 'c that federal government services should be available in French anywhere in Canada where there was a significant proportion of French-speaking citizens.

By that time, more and more federal employees were getting involved in French-language training as a condition of promotion. There was considerable resistance among English-speaking civil servants, however, and progress was slow and sporadic. Marcel Caron, a director of the bilingualism program, recalled: "Politically, the slow pace was necessary. We hoped to convince the public service that an adult could learn a second language." Last March, the federal government announced firm bilingual objectives for the civil service. By 1975, the government decreed, 60 percent of all senior executives would have to be bilingual, as would 50 percent of administra-tive and foreign service personnel, 40 percent of the next-senior group and so on down the line on a sliding scale to secretarial and technical groups,

Routine Is Not Enough

By William Weaver

ROME (IRT).—Is there a movement afoot to restore Puccini's kuit-neglected "La Rondine" to the repertory? It seems likely. A lew years ago RCA made a complete recording of the work. Thin, in Tew years ago McA made a complete recording of the work. This, 1968, it was revived in Trieste. This past fall it was given in Ireland, at the Wexford Festival, and the Trieste production has traveled to Bologna, and—this week—to Rome. If all this does prove to be a concerted effort, its aim is a worthy one. "La Romine, though not absolutely first-class Puccini, is still a piece with concepts of the property of the concepts of the property of sidetable charm and grace, and a couple of hit numbers (Megds's first aris, for example, and the big ensemble in the second act).

But performances like the one currently being offered in Rome are not likely to give this little opera a new, long-term lease on life.

Great works can be carelessly mounted and still prove effective; even the most slovenly "Traviata" or "Bohème" can squeak by. But imperfect operas require far more attention and pains. A production that is not well thought-out reveals all the weaknesses. And so Rome's "Romdine" seemed to underline the curt shift in tone from Act I to Act II and the current single-many stretchment. Act I to Act II and the curious aimlessness, not to say idiory of the opera's ending (the boy, when he finds out the girl has a "past green home to mother with hardly a moment's hesitation). A good performance, of course, cannot erase the opera's flaws, but it can make the opera's flaws, but it can make holding company. The same year it acquired Uranya, Oxford wrote off $2.3 million which it described at the time as its total investment in the Milan company. Another provision for $1.1 million in accumulated losses of Uranya was taken by Oxford in the third quarter of 1971.

First of all, "La Rondine" demands a protagonist with great, winning appeal. Edith Martelli just managed to sing the notes, not always beautifully: her tenor, Ruggero Bondino, was even less in the part, yelling his top notes, and holding them long enough to allow them to go flat. Then there is the second, comic pair of lowers. The maid, lisette, should be pert, a souhrette; Cecilig Fusco was got up like Sophie Tucker, minced constantly and inappropriately, and did not sing well. Neither did her west-workester, the tenor Angelo Mart not sing well. Neither did her poet-protector, the tenor Angelo Marchiandi. The uninspired staging by the television actor-timed director, Raoul Grassilli, was a detriment to all.

Despite the money put into Uranya by Oxford and increasing loans to the company from Mr. Sindona's bank-which mounted from $4.1 million outstanding Jan. 1, 1970, to $7 million last June 30 —Uranya's balance sheet, as of last June 30, showed its cur-rent liabilities of $3.1 million exceeded its total assets, which were $7.2 million.

The proxy material apparently does not state explicity, at any point, whether Oxford has guaranteed the $7 million in Uranya loans due Mr. Sindona's bank; at any rate, Oxford's counsel, when asked to point out such a state-ment, has not done so.

The proxy material also refers prominently to certain loans that Oxford would "almost certainly" have to repay if it liquidated Uranya, and to certain other loans that would be in default if it failed to pay this first set of loans. Repayment of these loans is practically impossible at this time, it added. There is no apparent explanation, though, of just what loans these are and in exactly what form such a chain of events

Mr. Porco, Oxford chairman, also is president and principal shareholder in Amerofina Inc., an investment banking firm that officially represents Mr. Sindons in U.S. dealings, He says that Mr. Sindona "wasn't involved in the determination" of the transaction. It was pretty much all American ideas," he adds. He also says the transaction was not designed to repay the Uranya loans due Mr. Sindona's bank. Interphoto, he says, "is looking for products," and Oxford's "got financial problems— that's what makes a deal." He adds: "You have to pay your debts. I don't see why it makes any difference whose bank it is."

GNP Growth Rate Revision May Fuel U.S. Budget Woes

DJ).—With the U.S. 1971 economy left looking much limper by a major statistical revision, the Nixon administration faces urgent decisions on policy for 1972.

Catching the President's budget and economic messages in their final phases of preparation, the Commerce Department set off an embarrassing statistical bombshell last week by conceding that the gross national product grew at worrisomely weaker rates in the second and third quarters than previously been announced.

Assuming that the weaker GNP figures are more realistic than the old versions, officials will have to brace for a bigger budget deficit than the $28 billion to $28 billion they had been expecting for the fiscal year ending next June 30. A "significant" increase in the deficit is expected, one insider says, and a clue comes in a Commerce Department calcula tion on the somewhat different "national income accounts" basis -the new version for the September quarter is red ink at a $27.7 billion annual rate, against

There is lively criticism of the The most striking aspect of Bonn government for permitting the GNP revision, analysts say, coal imports of nearly 10 million in the "real," or physical volume, which measures total output of private and governmentons a year under current con-tracts while the Ruhrkohle combine is not able to sell its coal tal goods and services. percent annual rate of real

GNP increase for last year's first quarter (a rebound from the late-1970 General Motors strike) remains intact. But the real GNP annual rate of gain for the second quarter was slashed from a healthy 4.8 to a sickly 3.4 percent and that for the third quarter was cut from an unsatisfactory 8.9 to a wobbly 2.7 percent.

This is worrisome, economists say, for several reasons: Ιt leaves the latest known rate of real GNP advance markedly below the 4 percent rate that is regarded necessary just to keep the unemployment rate from worsening; it, makes it likely that the fourth-quarter gain will prove to be closer to 5 percent than to the 6 or even 7 percent recently forecast; and it casts doubt on whether gains in productivity, or output per manour, actually have started on the strong uptrend deemed vital to big output gains this year.

Trans World Airlines, posting a 1971-72 high rose 2 3 4 to 48 1 4 after Friday's upswing of 2 1'4.
Other airline gainers on the active roster were Eastern Air Lines, up 1 1/8 to 24 3'4; American Airlines. up 1 1/8 to 42 1/8; Braniff, up 1 4 to 16, and Pan American World Airways, up 3/8 to 16 1, 2.

Favorable Reports

Fueling the takeoff in airline stocks—a group that shows sharp price swings in recent years—has been a wide assortment of buy recommendations and favorable readings in analyst polls. In essence, these recommendations maintain that the combination of cost-cutting in 1971 and the traffic gains predicted for 1973 will result in a sharp increase on the TWA, which sold last year as low as 13 3/8, was singled out for favorable comments today in an analyst roundup conducted by Barron's. And a survey of security analysts conducted by another publication, Investment Dealers' Digest, picked airlines as the favorite group for market action in the first months of 1972. Stocks of building-material concerns and insurance companies ran in the No. 2 and No. 3 spots, respectively Gold-mining issues hit pay dirt as bullion prices in London rose to their highest quotations in nearly four years. American-South African and Dome Mines each rose 1 1/8. Homestake Mining and Campbell Red Lake

Stocks on the American Exchange ended the session higher. The exchange index closed at 26.66, up .13. Advancing issues led declines 606 to 375. Volume rose to 5.98 million shares from 5.38 million Friday. The bond market closed at about its low of the day, with corporates off 1/2 point and government intermediates 2/32 to 10/32 lower. Some selling appeared, but there was little retail or professional interest to absorb the price declines, dealers said.

The life of an expert is sometimes wrongly conceived as one long round of imaginative bids and spectacular plays. The truth is that the expert gets results by bidding accurately, playing carefully and taking full advantage of his opponents' errors.

One of the rare cases of brilliancy in the recent Fall National Championships at Phoenix Ariz The hero was Alvin Roth of New York, who held the West cards.

South opened three clubs and was raised to game after an overcall of three diamonds. He ruffed the opening diamond lead, cashed the club king and led a division, in which case the last spade in dummy would eventually provide a discard for the potential heart loser. But there was an extra possibility, based on the possibility that the defenders' spades might be blocked. Consider what could have developed if West had made the routine play of the spade jack at the third trick. South would then here been to a position to make his game.

The third trick could have been won with the spade ace, and three rounds of hearts played. The defenders could have arranged to win this in either hand. but in any event a ruff-and-sluff situation would have developed, either at once or after taking the spade king.

But Roth foresaw this long-term. danger and alertly played his spade king. There was a good chance that his partner held the spade queen, and if South held that card there was no hope for the defense. South did the best he could by winning in the dummy, ruffing a diamond and re-entering dummy with a club lead to the ace. Next he led a low spade from dummy, and East rose to the occasion in his turn.

He resisted the temptation to play his queen, which would have squandered his partner's jack and permitted South to develop dummy's nine as a trick. In-stead be played low, allowing his partner to win, and a shift to hearts resulted in the defeat of the contract.

COLERIDGE, THE DAMAGED ARCHANGE

By Norman Fruman, Braziller. 607 pp. $12.56.

Reviewed by Thomas Lask

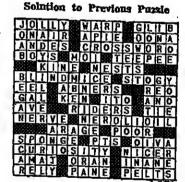

NORMAN FRUMAN has written a book that is relentlessly and devastatingly polemical and one of the most exciting 1 have read in years. It's one of those books that changes the configurations in the literary heavens, so that the starry arrangements don't appear quite as they did before.

No book I think will do more to indicate the dimensions of the "problem of Coleridge" than Fruman's. In the process he will make every reader rethink his conclusions as to the nature and meaning of the romantic movement, the nationalism of literature, the trustworthiness of literary evidence, the relation of language to the ideas and sensibility of an age. It will add a few more notes to the unending discussion of creativity and the unconscious.

Coleridge seems to me the ideal subject for these investigations. because of all the figures of the romantic movement he is one the nonscholar finds most difficult to measure for himself. The great reputation he has as the foremost literary critic in English, as the commentator on Shakespeare, as the brilliant conversationalist, as a superior metaphysician and thinker, has to be accepted mostly on the assurances of others. Only the poetry is exempt.

I recall my own disappointment with what appeared to me the ecrappiness of the Shakespeare A. C. Bradley on the great tragedies. Even after more than a century, the record is far from complete. Not all the documents are in, but many of the judgments are. Fruman, who teaches at California State College, has made them stand up for scrutiny. Narrowly speaking, "The Damaged Archangel" is not so much a study of the poet's writings as his character and cast of mind. But since his works reveal the man in ways he could scarcely hava imagined, his writings become the stuff of the author's searches. He starts out harmlessly enough by pointing ont that Coleridge was not above using the poetry of others (Wordsworth's for example) as his own, This was done under the pres-sure of journalistic deadlines and may have been excusable. But the author goes on to demonstrate that this pattern of unacknowledged borrowings was not a stray cliches, credited "overall determination" for the Cowboys' triumph. "We were all so determined, no one could stop us," Landry said. "We ran extremely well and I've always felt that if you can run on a team, you can beat that team. This is especially true when you have such a great defense as we have, which we proved again

Roger Stanbach, the quarter-back who guided the Cowboys to a 10-game winning streak, ignored his bruised ribs.

"Tve got a long time to heal," Staubach said. "Winning the Super Bowl is everything an athlete wants. The Dolphins played a zone, and double-teamed our wide receivers. But when the Cowboys run the ball, everything opens up. I guess I gave coach Landry a few gray hairs when I didn't see open receivers early in the game."

But the Cowboys had the run-ning game and the Dolphins did not. Duane Thomas gained 95 yards, with one touchdown, and Walt Garrison 74 as Dallas ran for 252 yards, a Super Bowl rec-ord. Mismi managed only 80 yards, 40 each for Jim Kiick and Larry Csonka

In the Dolphins' nomenclature, there is no such thing as a downand in pattern, but they do have two passes answering that de-scription. On one, which they call simply a slant, the receiver 10 yards, then breaks toward the middle. On the other, called a post pattern, the receiver goes deep and angles toward the goal

Presumably it was the latter which the Machiavelli of Pennsylvania Avenue had in mind. The Dolphins never did make it work with Warfield.

That incomplete pass for Miami's eighth play was on the short slant pattern from Warfield's usual position far out on the left flank. The next time Griese threw his way, Warfield had started downfield and yeared out toward the sideline. That pass was too high also, which was just as well politically. Herb Klein, of the White House staff, observed in a speech in Hot Springs, Ark, that no politician sensitive to economic issues would ever call a down-and-out.

Another Slant

Warfield went back to the short slant toward the middle,

Late in the second quarter Warfield lined up in slot left formation (five yards inside the wide receiver). He raced downfield, threw in a little aidestep, and clutched a pass on the Dallas 24. The gain put the Dolphins in position for their only score, on Garo Yepremian's 31-yard field

For Better, for Worse

WASHINGTON - You're going ous they had been since the economic indicators" this year. An economic indicator is a clue to what is really happening to the economy. From these hints, economists can make fautastic predictions of which way the country will tilt in the next 12 months. A man who works with nothing but economic indicators is Dr.

Friedrich Strasser, who is in charge of the "Input-Output Institute of Sensuous Economics."

A visit to Dr. Strasser's institute produced some very interesting but frightening informa-

Dr. Strasser said that at the moment all his economic indicators were pointing up.

"More people are starting to travel ou the airlines, which is a very good sign," he told me. "At the moment though, it's still pos-sible to book a flight without difficulty and have a comfortable ride without people sitting on your lap. But if things keep getting better, the airports won't be able to handle the traffic, the planes will be over-booked, luggage will be lost, and the airlines will have a very good economic year."

"Walt a minnte." I said. "Are you trying to say that if the economy gets better in this country, things will get worse?"

"Of course I am. Everyone knows the price of a good economy is a breakdown in services that the economy provides. The more refrigerators people buy, the less chance they have of getting them repaired. The more cars that are sold, the bigger pollution and traffic problems you have. The more the country conatmes, the less opportunity there is of getting rid of the garbage."

Dr. Strasser said one of his best economic indicators is the behav-ior of shop clerks, hotel reservation people and beadwaiters.

"The nicer they are," be said, "the more trouble the country is in. During the recent recession we found shop clerks, hotel peopla and beadwaiters the most courte-to bear a lot about "eco- nomic doldrums of the early

"This indicated to us that things were very bad. Lately we've been spot-checking, and we've discovered that the hotel people are getting snippety again, the clerks in stores are starting not to give a damm, and in some good restaurants the headwaiters, for the first time in two years, are becoming their old obnoxious patronizing selves. This shows that things are picking up, and the country could be in for a good year.'

"It's fantastic how you people arrive at your conclusions," I

"It's foolproof," Dr. Strasser said. "Let's take the building industry as an example. When the country is doing badly, no one is digging up the streets or drilling steel pilings into the ground, or making cement at six o'clock in the morning. People can get around easier, sleep better and work in a quieter atmosphere.

"But as soon as the economy improves, the wreckers come out to smash down buildings, streets are barricaded by cranes, water and gas are turned off, and the noise drives everyone to the point of suicide. By just checking the nervous breakdown figures in a city for the week, we can gauge how well the building industry is

"So the more anxious the country becomes, the better it is for all of us?"

"Exactly. The best economic indicators are the sales charts of the anti-acid stomach medicine companies. When sales of Alka-Seltzer, Bromo Seltzer, Pepto-Bismol and Rollaids are down, this means people are content and the dollar is in trouble. But when anti-acid sales are up, this means people are sick and getting their faith back in the country. You can't have economic growth without ulcer growth at the same

"Then you're predicting a good economic year and a miserable existence for all of us?" I asked. "Life won't be as bad as it was in the late sixtles when things were booming, but I predict it will be a good enough year that people will be able to feel how miserable a healthy economy can

Pearl Buck's Views of China, U.S.

By Mike Shanahan

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—On a March morning in 1927, Pearl Buck lay huddled inside a servant's mud hut in Nanking, during one of China's periodic upheavals.

Other Americans living there died at the hands of Communist revolutionaries in the shooting that followed. Miss Buck daughter of an American missionary, narrowly escaped. Her life was saved by peasants whom she had come to admire during half a lifetime in

A Nobel Prize, scores of books and 40 years in the United States later, Muss Buck, 79, recalls the peasants and spec-ulates on the future of China. "I have strong feelings for the peasants," she said. "After all, I grew up with them." With signs that there is new upheaval under way in China, Miss Buck said that the Chinese masses are ready for a different sort of leadership than that provided by Mao

Expectations

"There will be a dictator or possibly the start of a new emntre though not in one generation," she said, "But I look for a return of an empire, perhaps modified."

Meanwhile, she said, what-ever is going on inside China came earlier than she anticipated. "I had expected an upset in China, but it's happening earlier than I thought," Miss Buck said. "It's with the military, what I call the young generals, I have long expected that when Mao begins to fall, and he is the young generals will fight each other."

Miss Buck sald she anticithe emergence of a strong Chins, though one which may throw off any pretense of following Communist ideology once Mao is gone. But whatever the shape of the new leadership structure in Peking, Miss Buck said, a Chinese-dominated Southeast Asia with no American presence is inevitable Viewing China and the United States, she said: "There's a generation gap between nations just as between persons. We're a young people, and we don't have the maturity to recognize the futility of war. China long ago ceased to believe in ag-

Miss Buck is a native of West Virginia, where a cultural center is under construction in her name. She spends about a week every two months at the Pearl S. Buck Foundation in Philadelphia, a three-story townhouse on Rittenhouse Square. It is furnished with carved Chinese furniture and Azian pieces of art she brought to the United States long ago. Miss Buck speaks steadily and clearly about things both Chinese and American She is pleased that President Nixon is going to China but believes the journey will be a big politi-

"It's important politicallyeverything depends on how ha received," she said. "He was not invited as far as we know: it's possible that he received word that such a visit would be welcome, but I think not. "I think it was his own

Danby because it was a dying small town. With four foundation staff members and some personal funds, she decided a few years ago to pump new lifa into the village by encouraging tourism, new antique shops and the importation of Asian gift items for sale locally. It is an admittedly commercial venture which she said is motivated by a belief that in America, and elsewhere, the key to great civilizations lies far from the cities.

The operation was recently expanded with the opening of a new office in Saigon, a sign, Miss Buck said, of declining warfare in Vietnam. Miss Buck finds it difficult to generate excitement over the
